The 720P content is fine on the scale. Unfortunately, the interpolation is not as good as in some other televisions: the motion sometimes stuttered during normal content, especially the cartoons and the artifacts would appear in rare cases. The highlight of the remote control is the pointer: When the remote control is aimed at the TV, a cursor on the TV follows its movement, which allows you to select the elements of the menu directly and avoid clicking through the rest of the menu. There is a small content banner suggested in the Quick Applications menu, but it is not too intrusive. Note that this test only tests the retention of short-term images and not the permanent burn that can occur with a longer exposure to the static images. The LG E8 has an optional black-frame insert feature<sup>3</sup> helps eliminate motion blur and and The picture looks crisp. After 6 minutes, the retention is not visible and this, compared to the 2016 OLED TVs, is a big improvement. The textured back is a nice touch, as is the 'glass picture'. Native Contrast INF: 1 contrast with local attenuation N/A The LG E7P has an exceptional contrast ratio because, like other OLED TVs, when the TV is showing an all-black color, the TV doesn't emit any light. It looks elegant from any angle, and will certainly stand out in a room. However, many other competing LED TVs are much brighter, such as the Sony X930E, X900E, Samsung Mu8000 and Q9F. Each section has its own button in the remote menu, the quick menu and the full menu. In addition, the LG C8 can be brighter, which matters if you watch a lot of TV shows in a bright room. It can display our very good gradient test image and without any visible 8-bit band, which is ideal for HDR content. 4: 4: 4 The color is only correctly displayed in PC mode (also known as when the input icon is set to 'PC'). There's a fairly small gap before the image starts. EOTFS modes in game and PC modes are equally dark. The edges of the television are made of glass, and the sound bar acts as a support to support the TV very well. @ 70 3.32 db std.
